Q5 Do you agree with the CCGs view that (subject to careful consideration of the circumstances of the individual case to see whether there is an exceptional reason for adopting a more favourable view) the treatments addressed by this policy should not receive as high a priority in the allocation of resources as services of proven effectiveness for illnesses which are life threatening or cause more severe pain, discomfort or disability. To clarify: If the policy is adopted, the CCG will be justified in allocating more resources to services that have been proven to effectively treat life threatening conditions such as cancer, than it does to services for treatment of erectile dysfunction.

1	Whilst I think it should be strictly controlled, erectile dysfunction can have a devastating effect on peoples lives. This also can have a severe effect on the well being of any partners. I am referring here to people with a proper medical condition/injury and not just a loss of libido for which people can buy Viagra.	1/27/2017 4:09 PM

2	Because erectile dysfunction can have a severe debilitating psychological effect.	1/18/2017 9:15 PM
3	This should be treated on a case by case basis. I think it's wrong that something that could be causing severe mental hardship to someone should be swept away because its "Not cancer"	1/18/2017 4:50 PM

1	Again if it's just a loss of libido then let them buy Viagra. If it's a more complicated issue then a referral to hospital should be the next stage.	1/27/2017 4:09 PM

Q8 Section 3.5 – Do you agree the policy should not be applied (ie treatment should not be provided) if a patient’s GP has reason to suspect that the erectile dysfunction may be the presenting symptom of other serious physical or mental illness for which urgent assessment or treatment may be required. A patient may subsequently need to be considered in accordance with this guidance if the prescribing of specific medications for erectile dysfunction is subsequently requested.
